

DFI has recently completed a background study for WaterAid analysing central government allocations to the water, sanitation and hygiene sector (WASH). One of the challenges in doing the study was the lack of comprehensive WASH sector budget data, although DFI was able to draw on its previous work it had done in compiling aggregate sectoral data on central government spending. WaterAid plans to prepare an overall report based on a number of background papers including the one by DFI, which will be available on the WaterAid website later this year.