

A follow-up mission is in response to Government needs for additional technical support in an aspect debt or aid strategy analysis, such as updating debt strategies in negotiating debt relief with major creditors, including the Paris Club and related to the HIPC process, negotiating new financing agreements including assessing the viability of going to international capital markets or options for restructuring the domestic debt portfolio. In terms of services provided, the mission can be advisory and/or it can provide short-term training to officials.

The output of the mission is a report to Government.
